Rivervale Annual Town Report

A fictional report written for testing PDF summarising and question answering.

Chapter 1: Introduction and Mayor's Message

Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that public meetings changed by about 3 percent. Helen Okafor thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on public meetings during July and February. Aisha Khan thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on town services during January and April. The committee noted that public meetings remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Aisha Khan thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on town services during June and August. The council recorded all decisions on public meetings in the minutes, which are open to every resident.

The council recorded all decisions on resident feedback in the minutes, which are open to every resident. Lata Deshmukh reported that 51 of these were resolved within 25 days, while the rest needed further review. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that the annual plan changed by about 8 percent. Residents of Riverside said at a public hearing that public meetings had improved compared with the previous year. Rivervale has a population of 48,200 residents according to the census held on 3 March. A survey of 234 households found that 66 percent were satisfied with public meetings. The council recorded all decisions on the annual plan in the minutes, which are open to every resident.

In August, the council met at the Kiln Lane depot and reviewed 62 requests from residents about resident feedback. Ravi Menon reported that 26 of these were resolved within 22 days, while the rest needed further review. In February, the council met at the Kiln Lane depot and reviewed 60 requests from residents about resident feedback. The council recorded all decisions on resident feedback in the minutes, which are open to every resident. Mayor Helen Okafor was re-elected with 61 percent of the vote.

In April, the council met at the Eastside hall and reviewed 30 requests from residents about town services. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that public meetings changed by about 9 percent. This report covers the financial year ending 31 March. Residents of Kiln Lane said at a public hearing that the annual plan had improved compared with the previous year. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that public meetings changed by about 17 percent. The council recorded all decisions on resident feedback in the minutes, which are open to every resident. The committee noted that town services remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting.

The committee noted that the annual plan remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. The committee noted that town services remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. A survey of 579 households found that 63 percent were satisfied with the annual plan. Priya Nair thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on town services during September and March. The committee noted that resident feedback remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. In April, the council met at the Eastside hall and reviewed 17 requests from residents about town services.

Residents of Orchard said at a public hearing that the annual plan had improved compared with the previous year. The committee noted that town services remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. A survey of 628 households found that 69 percent were satisfied with resident feedback. Residents of Kiln Lane said at a public hearing that the annual plan had improved compared with the previous year. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that the annual plan changed by about 12 percent. Residents of Orchard said at a public hearing that resident feedback had improved compared with the previous year. The committee noted that public meetings remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting.

A survey of 377 households found that 59 percent were satisfied with town services. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that public meetings changed by about 5 percent. The committee noted that public meetings remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. In May, the council met at the Town Hall and reviewed 14 requests from residents about resident feedback. Tom Bridges reported that 39 of these were resolved within 29 days, while the rest needed further review. Residents of Lakeside said at a public hearing that the annual plan had improved compared with the previous year. In February, the council met at the Orchard Lane centre and reviewed 76 requests from residents about town services.

The committee noted that town services remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that public meetings changed by about 8 percent. A survey of 173 households found that 74 percent were satisfied with public meetings. The committee noted that the annual plan remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Ravi Menon thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on public meetings during December and December. In March, the council met at the Eastside hall and reviewed 25 requests from residents about town services.

A survey of 825 households found that 88 percent were satisfied with resident feedback. A survey of 621 households found that 86 percent were satisfied with town services. A survey of 489 households found that 71 percent were satisfied with public meetings. In August, the council met at the Town Hall and reviewed 39 requests from residents about resident feedback. Aisha Khan reported that 35 of these were resolved within 3 days, while the rest needed further review.

Residents of Eastside said at a public hearing that public meetings had improved compared with the previous year. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that resident feedback changed by about 16 percent. The committee noted that the annual plan remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Residents of Millgate said at a public hearing that the annual plan had improved compared with the previous year. In May, the council met at the Town Hall and reviewed 48 requests from residents about the annual plan. Omar Haddad thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on resident feedback during January and November. The committee noted that the annual plan remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. A survey of 458 households found that 85 percent were satisfied with town services.

The committee noted that resident feedback remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting.

Chapter 2: Education

Priya Nair thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on the scholarship fund during December and September. Residents of Eastside said at a public hearing that teacher training had improved compared with the previous year. Tom Bridges thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on classroom repairs during December and August. Residents of Eastside said at a public hearing that teacher training had improved compared with the previous year. The committee noted that teacher training remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. A survey of 765 households found that 55 percent were satisfied with the scholarship fund. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that the scholarship fund changed by about 15 percent. Residents of Eastside said at a public hearing that exam results had improved compared with the previous year.

Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that exam results changed by about 4 percent. A survey of 452 households found that 61 percent were satisfied with exam results. Helen Okafor thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on classroom repairs during November and January. Rivervale has 14 schools, and the largest is Greenfield Secondary with 1,350 students. In March, the school board met at the Orchard Lane centre and reviewed 52 requests from residents about exam results.

The council recorded all decisions on teacher training in the minutes, which are open to every resident. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that teacher training changed by about 4 percent. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that exam results changed by about 15 percent. Aisha Khan thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on the scholarship fund during January and August. In May, the school board met at the Eastside hall and reviewed 47 requests from residents about teacher training. The council recorded all decisions on exam results in the minutes, which are open to every resident.

A survey of 477 households found that 84 percent were satisfied with teacher training. The committee noted that classroom repairs remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. A survey of 876 households found that 83 percent were satisfied with exam results. The council recorded all decisions on the scholarship fund in the minutes, which are open to every resident. A survey of 340 households found that 70 percent were satisfied with exam results.

Residents of Eastside said at a public hearing that classroom repairs had improved compared with the previous year. In August, the school board met at the Orchard Lane centre and reviewed 59 requests from residents about exam results. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that the scholarship fund changed by about 5 percent. The new science lab at Greenfield opened on 9 August at a cost of 2.4 million rupees. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that teacher training changed by about 8 percent. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that teacher training changed by about 17 percent. Aisha Khan thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on classroom repairs during November and September.

A survey of 576 households found that 56 percent were satisfied with exam results. Priya Nair thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on classroom repairs during April and January. In January, the school board met at the Mill Road office and reviewed 62 requests from residents about exam results. A survey of 652 households found that 67 percent were satisfied with exam results. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that classroom repairs changed by about 9 percent. The committee noted that exam results remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting.

Residents of Riverside said at a public hearing that classroom repairs had improved compared with the previous year. Residents of Lakeside said at a public hearing that classroom repairs had improved compared with the previous year. The council recorded all decisions on classroom repairs in the minutes, which are open to every resident. The council recorded all decisions on teacher training in the minutes, which are open to every resident. Omar Haddad thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on exam results during November and March. The committee noted that the scholarship fund remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. The committee noted that the scholarship fund remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Residents of Kiln Lane said at a public hearing that teacher training had improved compared with the previous year.

Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that the scholarship fund changed by about 14 percent. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that teacher training changed by about 7 percent. A survey of 184 households found that 69 percent were satisfied with the scholarship fund. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that teacher training changed by about 3 percent. Neil Fernandes reported that 31 of these were resolved within 21 days, while the rest needed further review.

The council recorded all decisions on exam results in the minutes, which are open to every resident. A survey of 742 households found that 83 percent were satisfied with classroom repairs. In January, the school board met at the Kiln Lane depot and reviewed 15 requests from residents about teacher training. Residents of Eastside said at a public hearing that exam results had improved compared with the previous year. The pass rate in the final exams rose to 91 percent. A survey of 597 households found that 84 percent were satisfied with classroom repairs.

Lata Deshmukh reported that 26 of these were resolved within 26 days, while the rest needed further review. A survey of 323 households found that 71 percent were satisfied with exam results. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that classroom repairs changed by about 17 percent. Priya Nair thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on exam results during December and April. In February, the school board met at the Kiln Lane depot and reviewed 32 requests from residents about teacher training. In December, the school board met at the Town Hall and reviewed 20 requests from residents about classroom repairs. Residents of Lakeside said at a public hearing that classroom repairs had improved compared with the previous year.

Aisha Khan reported that 26 of these were resolved within 16 days, while the rest needed further review. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that teacher training changed by about 15 percent.

Chapter 3: Health

In June, the health committee met at the Town Hall and reviewed 74 requests from residents about ambulance calls. Residents of Eastside said at a public hearing that ambulance calls had improved compared with the previous year. Lata Deshmukh thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on ambulance calls during July and December. The committee noted that ambulance calls remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. The committee noted that vaccination remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Residents of Riverside said at a public hearing that vaccination had improved compared with the previous year. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that vaccination changed by about 5 percent. The committee noted that ambulance calls remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting.

The council recorded all decisions on nurse recruitment in the minutes, which are open to every resident. A survey of 590 households found that 91 percent were satisfied with vaccination. The Rivervale District Clinic added a 30-bed ward in June. The committee noted that vaccination remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. The committee noted that ambulance calls remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. The council recorded all decisions on ambulance calls in the minutes, which are open to every resident. The council recorded all decisions on nurse recruitment in the minutes, which are open to every resident.

The committee noted that nurse recruitment remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. In February, the health committee met at the Orchard Lane centre and reviewed 57 requests from residents about nurse recruitment. The council recorded all decisions on vaccination in the minutes, which are open to every resident. Lata Deshmukh thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on ambulance calls during August and May. A survey of 889 households found that 72 percent were satisfied with vaccination. The council recorded all decisions on clinic services in the minutes, which are open to every resident.

Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that ambulance calls changed by about 4 percent. Priya Nair reported that 54 of these were resolved within 17 days, while the rest needed further review. Ravi Menon reported that 36 of these were resolved within 25 days, while the rest needed further review. Priya Nair reported that 35 of these were resolved within 18 days, while the rest needed further review. The council recorded all decisions on nurse recruitment in the minutes, which are open to every resident. A survey of 334 households found that 95 percent were satisfied with clinic services.

In November, the health committee met at the Eastside hall and reviewed 24 requests from residents about vaccination. The committee noted that ambulance calls remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Neil Fernandes thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on ambulance calls during May and September. The council recorded all decisions on clinic services in the minutes, which are open to every resident. Helen Okafor thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on nurse recruitment during September and October. Ravi Menon thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on vaccination during October and March.

The committee noted that ambulance calls remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. In June, the health committee met at the Orchard Lane centre and reviewed 84 requests from residents about clinic services. Ravi Menon thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on nurse recruitment during August and February. The council recorded all decisions on vaccination in the minutes, which are open to every resident. The council recorded all decisions on vaccination in the minutes, which are open to every resident. The council recorded all decisions on clinic services in the minutes, which are open to every resident.

A survey of 473 households found that 78 percent were satisfied with nurse recruitment. Aisha Khan reported that 35 of these were resolved within 15 days, while the rest needed further review. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that vaccination changed by about 15 percent. Priya Nair thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on nurse recruitment during October and April. Dr. Meera Banerjee leads the vaccination drive, which reached 12,600 children. In May, the health committee met at the Kiln Lane depot and reviewed 30 requests from residents about clinic services. Residents of Orchard said at a public hearing that ambulance calls had improved compared with the previous year.

The council recorded all decisions on ambulance calls in the minutes, which are open to every resident. Residents of Riverside said at a public hearing that ambulance calls had improved compared with the previous year. The committee noted that clinic services remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. In June, the health committee met at the Kiln Lane depot and reviewed 89 requests from residents about vaccination. Lata Deshmukh thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on vaccination during February and August. The average ambulance response time fell to 11 minutes.

In January, the health committee met at the Kiln Lane depot and reviewed 59 requests from residents about nurse recruitment. Omar Haddad reported that 46 of these were resolved within 5 days, while the rest needed further review. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that clinic services changed by about 2 percent. The council recorded all decisions on clinic services in the minutes, which are open to every resident. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that vaccination changed by about 9 percent.

Residents of Eastside said at a public hearing that clinic services had improved compared with the previous year. Tom Bridges reported that 35 of these were resolved within 6 days, while the rest needed further review. In March, the health committee met at the Orchard Lane centre and reviewed 82 requests from residents about nurse recruitment. In May, the health committee met at the Eastside hall and reviewed 54 requests from residents about ambulance calls. Neil Fernandes reported that 40 of these were resolved within 18 days, while the rest needed further review.

A survey of 316 households found that 58 percent were satisfied with vaccination. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that ambulance calls changed by about 7 percent. Tom Bridges thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on vaccination during April and May.

Chapter 4: Roads and Transport

In September, the transport office met at the Eastside hall and reviewed 48 requests from residents about traffic signals. A survey of 869 households found that 78 percent were satisfied with bridge works. Ravi Menon reported that 54 of these were resolved within 25 days, while the rest needed further review. The council recorded all decisions on road repairs in the minutes, which are open to every resident. The committee noted that bus timetables remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. The council recorded all decisions on bridge works in the minutes, which are open to every resident. The council recorded all decisions on bus timetables in the minutes, which are open to every resident. The council recorded all decisions on road repairs in the minutes, which are open to every resident.

Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that road repairs changed by about 14 percent. The committee noted that bus timetables remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Helen Okafor thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on road repairs during April and September. A survey of 786 households found that 61 percent were satisfied with road repairs. Residents of Orchard said at a public hearing that bridge works had improved compared with the previous year.

The Mill Road bridge was rebuilt in 7 months and reopened on 22 November. The committee noted that bus timetables remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. A survey of 356 households found that 90 percent were satisfied with traffic signals. The council recorded all decisions on traffic signals in the minutes, which are open to every resident. The committee noted that road repairs remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting.

Priya Nair reported that 38 of these were resolved within 15 days, while the rest needed further review. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that traffic signals changed by about 5 percent. The committee noted that traffic signals remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. A survey of 859 households found that 84 percent were satisfied with bridge works. Aisha Khan thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on traffic signals during September and September. A survey of 240 households found that 76 percent were satisfied with bus timetables. Lata Deshmukh thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on traffic signals during January and January. The council recorded all decisions on bus timetables in the minutes, which are open to every resident.

Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that traffic signals changed by about 14 percent. Aisha Khan reported that 9 of these were resolved within 29 days, while the rest needed further review. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that bus timetables changed by about 18 percent. In November, the transport office met at the Kiln Lane depot and reviewed 25 requests from residents about traffic signals. A survey of 250 households found that 92 percent were satisfied with road repairs. The council recorded all decisions on road repairs in the minutes, which are open to every resident. Helen Okafor reported that 38 of these were resolved within 18 days, while the rest needed further review. Bus Route 5 now runs every 15 minutes.

Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that road repairs changed by about 5 percent. The council recorded all decisions on road repairs in the minutes, which are open to every resident. Residents of Eastside said at a public hearing that bridge works had improved compared with the previous year. Residents of Lakeside said at a public hearing that bus timetables had improved compared with the previous year. The committee noted that bridge works remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Omar Haddad thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on bus timetables during November and February.

Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that bus timetables changed by about 9 percent. A survey of 395 households found that 65 percent were satisfied with bridge works. Priya Nair thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on traffic signals during July and November. A survey of 563 households found that 93 percent were satisfied with bus timetables. Lata Deshmukh reported that 47 of these were resolved within 25 days, while the rest needed further review. The town repaired 38 kilometres of road during the year.

Tom Bridges reported that 17 of these were resolved within 24 days, while the rest needed further review. A survey of 558 households found that 73 percent were satisfied with traffic signals. The committee noted that road repairs remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Lata Deshmukh thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on road repairs during June and November. The committee noted that bus timetables remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. The council recorded all decisions on road repairs in the minutes, which are open to every resident. In April, the transport office met at the Town Hall and reviewed 16 requests from residents about traffic signals.

Residents of Orchard said at a public hearing that road repairs had improved compared with the previous year. The committee noted that bridge works remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. The committee noted that traffic signals remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Residents of Millgate said at a public hearing that bus timetables had improved compared with the previous year. Helen Okafor reported that 43 of these were resolved within 17 days, while the rest needed further review.

The council recorded all decisions on road repairs in the minutes, which are open to every resident. The council recorded all decisions on traffic signals in the minutes, which are open to every resident. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that bridge works changed by about 8 percent. Lata Deshmukh reported that 46 of these were resolved within 10 days, while the rest needed further review. A survey of 886 households found that 74 percent were satisfied with traffic signals.

Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that road repairs changed by about 3 percent. Tom Bridges thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on bus timetables during January and April.

Chapter 5: Water and Sanitation

The committee noted that pipe repairs remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. The committee noted that drain cleaning remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that pipe repairs changed by about 4 percent. A survey of 812 households found that 63 percent were satisfied with waste collection. Residents of Riverside said at a public hearing that waste collection had improved compared with the previous year. The council recorded all decisions on waste collection in the minutes, which are open to every resident. A survey of 704 households found that 91 percent were satisfied with pipe repairs. Omar Haddad reported that 37 of these were resolved within 25 days, while the rest needed further review.

Lata Deshmukh thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on pipe repairs during September and March. In June, the water board met at the Town Hall and reviewed 88 requests from residents about drain cleaning. Residents of Millgate said at a public hearing that pipe repairs had improved compared with the previous year. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that pipe repairs changed by about 12 percent. Residents of Eastside said at a public hearing that pipe repairs had improved compared with the previous year. Aisha Khan reported that 23 of these were resolved within 30 days, while the rest needed further review. In January, the water board met at the Mill Road office and reviewed 74 requests from residents about water quality tests. The committee noted that waste collection remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting.

The committee noted that drain cleaning remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that pipe repairs changed by about 16 percent. The committee noted that water quality tests remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Aisha Khan reported that 28 of these were resolved within 28 days, while the rest needed further review. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that pipe repairs changed by about 12 percent.

Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that water quality tests changed by about 6 percent. The council recorded all decisions on water quality tests in the minutes, which are open to every resident. The Eastside water tank holds 5 million litres. A survey of 225 households found that 67 percent were satisfied with water quality tests. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that waste collection changed by about 10 percent.

Water loss from leaking pipes dropped from 24 percent to 15 percent. A survey of 608 households found that 67 percent were satisfied with pipe repairs. In March, the water board met at the Town Hall and reviewed 22 requests from residents about pipe repairs. In November, the water board met at the Town Hall and reviewed 39 requests from residents about drain cleaning. In July, the water board met at the Town Hall and reviewed 90 requests from residents about waste collection. In June, the water board met at the Eastside hall and reviewed 19 requests from residents about pipe repairs.

Residents of Kiln Lane said at a public hearing that waste collection had improved compared with the previous year. A survey of 712 households found that 84 percent were satisfied with waste collection. A survey of 521 households found that 64 percent were satisfied with drain cleaning. The committee noted that water quality tests remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. The committee noted that drain cleaning remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting.

Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that water quality tests changed by about 3 percent. Neil Fernandes thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on water quality tests during November and November. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that waste collection changed by about 17 percent. A new sewage plant is planned at Kiln Lane. A survey of 315 households found that 75 percent were satisfied with water quality tests.

Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that water quality tests changed by about 5 percent. A survey of 625 households found that 80 percent were satisfied with drain cleaning. Tom Bridges thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on water quality tests during June and January. Lata Deshmukh thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on water quality tests during December and February. The committee noted that waste collection remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting.

Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that pipe repairs changed by about 10 percent. In July, the water board met at the Eastside hall and reviewed 46 requests from residents about waste collection. Lata Deshmukh thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on water quality tests during December and December. Tom Bridges thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on water quality tests during March and November. Omar Haddad reported that 30 of these were resolved within 25 days, while the rest needed further review. In August, the water board met at the Orchard Lane centre and reviewed 77 requests from residents about drain cleaning. Aisha Khan reported that 47 of these were resolved within 24 days, while the rest needed further review. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that water quality tests changed by about 13 percent.

Residents of Orchard said at a public hearing that drain cleaning had improved compared with the previous year. Omar Haddad reported that 11 of these were resolved within 14 days, while the rest needed further review. Priya Nair reported that 49 of these were resolved within 6 days, while the rest needed further review. The committee noted that waste collection remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Residents of Lakeside said at a public hearing that waste collection had improved compared with the previous year.

A survey of 356 households found that 63 percent were satisfied with waste collection. The council recorded all decisions on waste collection in the minutes, which are open to every resident. The committee noted that pipe repairs remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Lata Deshmukh thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on drain cleaning during September and July. The committee noted that drain cleaning remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting.

Chapter 6: Parks and Environment

The council recorded all decisions on lake cleaning in the minutes, which are open to every resident. The committee noted that recycling remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Tom Bridges thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on recycling during May and November. Omar Haddad thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on garden upkeep during September and May. The committee noted that tree planting remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that garden upkeep changed by about 16 percent. Residents of Kiln Lane said at a public hearing that lake cleaning had improved compared with the previous year. The committee noted that tree planting remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting.

Residents of Kiln Lane said at a public hearing that lake cleaning had improved compared with the previous year. The committee noted that recycling remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Residents of Lakeside said at a public hearing that lake cleaning had improved compared with the previous year. The council recorded all decisions on recycling in the minutes, which are open to every resident. Residents of Orchard said at a public hearing that tree planting had improved compared with the previous year. A survey of 356 households found that 63 percent were satisfied with recycling.

A survey of 349 households found that 64 percent were satisfied with tree planting. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that tree planting changed by about 11 percent. Priya Nair reported that 7 of these were resolved within 4 days, while the rest needed further review. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that garden upkeep changed by about 2 percent. A survey of 426 households found that 89 percent were satisfied with recycling. The committee noted that lake cleaning remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Residents of Lakeside said at a public hearing that lake cleaning had improved compared with the previous year. The committee noted that tree planting remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting.

The town planted 3,500 trees during the monsoon season. Residents of Millgate said at a public hearing that lake cleaning had improved compared with the previous year. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that tree planting changed by about 3 percent. The committee noted that tree planting remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. The council recorded all decisions on recycling in the minutes, which are open to every resident. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that garden upkeep changed by about 3 percent.

Tom Bridges thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on recycling during November and September. Residents of Orchard said at a public hearing that garden upkeep had improved compared with the previous year. Helen Okafor thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on garden upkeep during February and April. The council recorded all decisions on tree planting in the minutes, which are open to every resident. Lakeside Park is cleaned every Thursday by 60 volunteers. The council recorded all decisions on lake cleaning in the minutes, which are open to every resident.

In July, the parks team met at the Orchard Lane centre and reviewed 46 requests from residents about recycling. The council recorded all decisions on tree planting in the minutes, which are open to every resident. Priya Nair reported that 52 of these were resolved within 14 days, while the rest needed further review. Helen Okafor thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on garden upkeep during February and September. Plastic bags were banned in the weekly market on 1 January.

The council recorded all decisions on garden upkeep in the minutes, which are open to every resident. The committee noted that lake cleaning remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. In July, the parks team met at the Kiln Lane depot and reviewed 47 requests from residents about garden upkeep. Omar Haddad reported that 50 of these were resolved within 14 days, while the rest needed further review. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that tree planting changed by about 11 percent.

Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that garden upkeep changed by about 16 percent. A survey of 423 households found that 62 percent were satisfied with garden upkeep. The committee noted that tree planting remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that tree planting changed by about 16 percent. A survey of 711 households found that 61 percent were satisfied with tree planting. The committee noted that garden upkeep remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting.

The committee noted that recycling remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Priya Nair reported that 41 of these were resolved within 16 days, while the rest needed further review. Residents of Riverside said at a public hearing that lake cleaning had improved compared with the previous year. A survey of 429 households found that 93 percent were satisfied with lake cleaning. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that recycling changed by about 5 percent. The council recorded all decisions on tree planting in the minutes, which are open to every resident. The council recorded all decisions on recycling in the minutes, which are open to every resident. The committee noted that tree planting remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting.

Priya Nair thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on garden upkeep during April and November. The council recorded all decisions on garden upkeep in the minutes, which are open to every resident. Residents of Kiln Lane said at a public hearing that lake cleaning had improved compared with the previous year. In December, the parks team met at the Kiln Lane depot and reviewed 14 requests from residents about recycling. The committee noted that garden upkeep remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting.

The council recorded all decisions on recycling in the minutes, which are open to every resident. The committee noted that tree planting remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting.

Chapter 7: Library and Culture

Tom Bridges reported that 39 of these were resolved within 5 days, while the rest needed further review. Residents of Eastside said at a public hearing that festival planning had improved compared with the previous year. In August, the culture office met at the Orchard Lane centre and reviewed 42 requests from residents about book lending. Ravi Menon thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on the reading garden during February and December. In January, the culture office met at the Town Hall and reviewed 63 requests from residents about the poetry evening.

The council recorded all decisions on the poetry evening in the minutes, which are open to every resident. Aisha Khan thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on book lending during January and February. Tom Bridges thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on book lending during November and January. Ravi Menon thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on the reading garden during February and October. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that the reading garden changed by about 12 percent. Helen Okafor reported that 38 of these were resolved within 15 days, while the rest needed further review.

In November, the culture office met at the Mill Road office and reviewed 67 requests from residents about festival planning. The committee noted that the reading garden remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. The Rivervale Community Library lent 96,000 books this year. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that the poetry evening changed by about 13 percent. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that the poetry evening changed by about 12 percent.

Ravi Menon reported that 8 of these were resolved within 23 days, while the rest needed further review. Residents of Orchard said at a public hearing that the reading garden had improved compared with the previous year. Residents of Riverside said at a public hearing that the reading garden had improved compared with the previous year. Neil Fernandes reported that 9 of these were resolved within 26 days, while the rest needed further review. The committee noted that the poetry evening remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Helen Okafor thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on the reading garden during December and December. The Autumn Festival drew 8,400 visitors over 3 days. Residents of Kiln Lane said at a public hearing that book lending had improved compared with the previous year.

A survey of 249 households found that 58 percent were satisfied with the poetry evening. Residents of Millgate said at a public hearing that the reading garden had improved compared with the previous year. A survey of 404 households found that 65 percent were satisfied with festival planning. Residents of Millgate said at a public hearing that book lending had improved compared with the previous year. Residents of Eastside said at a public hearing that book lending had improved compared with the previous year.

The council recorded all decisions on the poetry evening in the minutes, which are open to every resident. The council recorded all decisions on festival planning in the minutes, which are open to every resident. Omar Haddad thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on book lending during September and January. The council recorded all decisions on the reading garden in the minutes, which are open to every resident. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that book lending changed by about 18 percent. In September, the culture office met at the Mill Road office and reviewed 75 requests from residents about the reading garden. In June, the culture office met at the Mill Road office and reviewed 41 requests from residents about the reading garden.

The council recorded all decisions on the reading garden in the minutes, which are open to every resident. The council recorded all decisions on the reading garden in the minutes, which are open to every resident. A survey of 331 households found that 76 percent were satisfied with book lending. Residents of Lakeside said at a public hearing that the reading garden had improved compared with the previous year. Tom Bridges reported that 38 of these were resolved within 7 days, while the rest needed further review.

The committee noted that the poetry evening remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. In July, the culture office met at the Town Hall and reviewed 49 requests from residents about book lending. Ravi Menon reported that 42 of these were resolved within 24 days, while the rest needed further review. A survey of 571 households found that 78 percent were satisfied with the poetry evening. The library's late fine is 2 rupees per day for each book. In October, the culture office met at the Orchard Lane centre and reviewed 39 requests from residents about the poetry evening. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that the poetry evening changed by about 9 percent.

The council recorded all decisions on festival planning in the minutes, which are open to every resident. Priya Nair reported that 41 of these were resolved within 20 days, while the rest needed further review. In November, the culture office met at the Mill Road office and reviewed 62 requests from residents about the reading garden. A survey of 831 households found that 92 percent were satisfied with the reading garden. Helen Okafor thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on the reading garden during December and September. Residents of Millgate said at a public hearing that the reading garden had improved compared with the previous year. Ravi Menon reported that 31 of these were resolved within 26 days, while the rest needed further review. The committee noted that festival planning remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting.

In March, the culture office met at the Orchard Lane centre and reviewed 61 requests from residents about book lending. Lata Deshmukh reported that 56 of these were resolved within 17 days, while the rest needed further review. In April, the culture office met at the Mill Road office and reviewed 25 requests from residents about festival planning. In January, the culture office met at the Town Hall and reviewed 40 requests from residents about the reading garden. A survey of 624 households found that 76 percent were satisfied with festival planning.

A survey of 482 households found that 87 percent were satisfied with the reading garden. Residents of Eastside said at a public hearing that festival planning had improved compared with the previous year. Omar Haddad reported that 32 of these were resolved within 18 days, while the rest needed further review. The council recorded all decisions on book lending in the minutes, which are open to every resident.

Chapter 8: Local Business and Markets

Ravi Menon thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on market stalls during December and February. The committee noted that shop licences remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. The council recorded all decisions on small loans in the minutes, which are open to every resident. Aisha Khan thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on market stalls during December and April. The council recorded all decisions on training for traders in the minutes, which are open to every resident.

Residents of Millgate said at a public hearing that shop licences had improved compared with the previous year. A survey of 262 households found that 69 percent were satisfied with training for traders. In December, the business panel met at the Mill Road office and reviewed 51 requests from residents about training for traders. Residents of Millgate said at a public hearing that market stalls had improved compared with the previous year. The council recorded all decisions on shop licences in the minutes, which are open to every resident. Residents of Orchard said at a public hearing that training for traders had improved compared with the previous year.

Omar Haddad thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on market stalls during May and November. Omar Haddad thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on market stalls during January and November. Ravi Menon thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on shop licences during January and December. In April, the business panel met at the Orchard Lane centre and reviewed 32 requests from residents about small loans. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that training for traders changed by about 6 percent. In November, the business panel met at the Town Hall and reviewed 84 requests from residents about market stalls. The council recorded all decisions on small loans in the minutes, which are open to every resident.

A survey of 205 households found that 60 percent were satisfied with shop licences. Residents of Kiln Lane said at a public hearing that small loans had improved compared with the previous year. The council recorded all decisions on training for traders in the minutes, which are open to every resident. Lata Deshmukh reported that 25 of these were resolved within 17 days, while the rest needed further review. Residents of Orchard said at a public hearing that small loans had improved compared with the previous year.

Omar Haddad reported that 12 of these were resolved within 19 days, while the rest needed further review. The council recorded all decisions on small loans in the minutes, which are open to every resident. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that training for traders changed by about 13 percent. In January, the business panel met at the Orchard Lane centre and reviewed 57 requests from residents about shop licences. In November, the business panel met at the Eastside hall and reviewed 63 requests from residents about shop licences. Omar Haddad thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on training for traders during November and March. A survey of 482 households found that 95 percent were satisfied with market stalls. Aisha Khan thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on market stalls during October and October.

A survey of 364 households found that 58 percent were satisfied with small loans. Residents of Lakeside said at a public hearing that small loans had improved compared with the previous year. In December, the business panel met at the Orchard Lane centre and reviewed 66 requests from residents about shop licences. In March, the business panel met at the Town Hall and reviewed 14 requests from residents about market stalls. Lata Deshmukh reported that 48 of these were resolved within 9 days, while the rest needed further review. A survey of 329 households found that 65 percent were satisfied with small loans. In August, the business panel met at the Kiln Lane depot and reviewed 16 requests from residents about training for traders. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that training for traders changed by about 6 percent.

Lata Deshmukh thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on shop licences during March and December. Residents of Millgate said at a public hearing that training for traders had improved compared with the previous year. Residents of Riverside said at a public hearing that shop licences had improved compared with the previous year. The weekly market has 210 stalls. The council recorded all decisions on shop licences in the minutes, which are open to every resident. In February, the business panel met at the Mill Road office and reviewed 25 requests from residents about training for traders. The council recorded all decisions on market stalls in the minutes, which are open to every resident. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that training for traders changed by about 10 percent.

The council recorded all decisions on training for traders in the minutes, which are open to every resident. In August, the business panel met at the Town Hall and reviewed 23 requests from residents about training for traders. A survey of 272 households found that 96 percent were satisfied with shop licences. The committee noted that market stalls remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. The council recorded all decisions on small loans in the minutes, which are open to every resident.

Residents of Orchard said at a public hearing that training for traders had improved compared with the previous year. A survey of 753 households found that 76 percent were satisfied with shop licences. Helen Okafor thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on shop licences during February and March. Small business loans worth 18 million rupees were given to 140 shops. The largest employer is Kestrel Textiles with 900 workers.

Residents of Millgate said at a public hearing that small loans had improved compared with the previous year. Residents of Lakeside said at a public hearing that training for traders had improved compared with the previous year. Tom Bridges reported that 53 of these were resolved within 29 days, while the rest needed further review. In May, the business panel met at the Orchard Lane centre and reviewed 23 requests from residents about training for traders. The committee noted that shop licences remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Priya Nair thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on shop licences during July and December.

Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that small loans changed by about 14 percent. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that small loans changed by about 7 percent.

Chapter 9: Public Safety

The committee noted that emergency training remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. In April, the safety board met at the Town Hall and reviewed 69 requests from residents about street lighting. Tom Bridges reported that 32 of these were resolved within 27 days, while the rest needed further review. The committee noted that fire drills remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. The committee noted that street lighting remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Residents of Kiln Lane said at a public hearing that fire drills had improved compared with the previous year. Aisha Khan thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on street lighting during February and April.

Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that fire drills changed by about 6 percent. Residents of Riverside said at a public hearing that fire drills had improved compared with the previous year. The council recorded all decisions on street lighting in the minutes, which are open to every resident. The committee noted that street lighting remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. The committee noted that street lighting remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. The fire station responded to 112 calls during the year. Helen Okafor thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on street lighting during April and November. In June, the safety board met at the Eastside hall and reviewed 87 requests from residents about street lighting.

Residents of Riverside said at a public hearing that night patrols had improved compared with the previous year. In July, the safety board met at the Kiln Lane depot and reviewed 35 requests from residents about emergency training. The council recorded all decisions on fire drills in the minutes, which are open to every resident. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that night patrols changed by about 16 percent. Residents of Orchard said at a public hearing that night patrols had improved compared with the previous year. In July, the safety board met at the Kiln Lane depot and reviewed 51 requests from residents about emergency training. The committee noted that emergency training remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Neil Fernandes thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on street lighting during March and June.

The committee noted that fire drills remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Neil Fernandes thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on fire drills during October and May. The committee noted that night patrols remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Residents of Eastside said at a public hearing that fire drills had improved compared with the previous year. Residents of Kiln Lane said at a public hearing that emergency training had improved compared with the previous year. Omar Haddad thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on night patrols during April and June. The council recorded all decisions on emergency training in the minutes, which are open to every resident. Ravi Menon reported that 24 of these were resolved within 17 days, while the rest needed further review.

Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that night patrols changed by about 18 percent. The council recorded all decisions on night patrols in the minutes, which are open to every resident. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that street lighting changed by about 12 percent. Street lights were upgraded to LED on 45 roads, cutting power use by 40 percent. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that night patrols changed by about 16 percent.

Residents of Kiln Lane said at a public hearing that street lighting had improved compared with the previous year. Priya Nair thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on fire drills during November and January. The volunteer night patrol has 75 members. The committee noted that night patrols remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. The council recorded all decisions on emergency training in the minutes, which are open to every resident. The committee noted that fire drills remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. The committee noted that fire drills remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Residents of Eastside said at a public hearing that fire drills had improved compared with the previous year.

Helen Okafor reported that 24 of these were resolved within 26 days, while the rest needed further review. A survey of 765 households found that 64 percent were satisfied with emergency training. Residents of Eastside said at a public hearing that fire drills had improved compared with the previous year. Residents of Lakeside said at a public hearing that emergency training had improved compared with the previous year. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that emergency training changed by about 7 percent. Residents of Riverside said at a public hearing that night patrols had improved compared with the previous year.

Residents of Kiln Lane said at a public hearing that street lighting had improved compared with the previous year. Priya Nair reported that 58 of these were resolved within 24 days, while the rest needed further review. The committee noted that street lighting remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Residents of Lakeside said at a public hearing that fire drills had improved compared with the previous year. The council recorded all decisions on street lighting in the minutes, which are open to every resident. Tom Bridges reported that 14 of these were resolved within 11 days, while the rest needed further review. Residents of Lakeside said at a public hearing that night patrols had improved compared with the previous year. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that fire drills changed by about 12 percent.

The council recorded all decisions on street lighting in the minutes, which are open to every resident. Lata Deshmukh reported that 42 of these were resolved within 27 days, while the rest needed further review. Residents of Kiln Lane said at a public hearing that fire drills had improved compared with the previous year. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that emergency training changed by about 8 percent. Lata Deshmukh thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on fire drills during December and November. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that fire drills changed by about 11 percent.

The committee noted that emergency training remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting.

Chapter 10: Housing

The council recorded all decisions on new homes in the minutes, which are open to every resident. Residents of Lakeside said at a public hearing that rent support had improved compared with the previous year. A survey of 184 households found that 94 percent were satisfied with repairs to old buildings. Omar Haddad reported that 37 of these were resolved within 25 days, while the rest needed further review. In January, the housing office met at the Kiln Lane depot and reviewed 40 requests from residents about new homes. Aisha Khan thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on the waiting list during August and May. In February, the housing office met at the Orchard Lane centre and reviewed 20 requests from residents about the waiting list.

Ravi Menon thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on new homes during January and May. The council recorded all decisions on repairs to old buildings in the minutes, which are open to every resident. A survey of 776 households found that 68 percent were satisfied with rent support. A survey of 348 households found that 80 percent were satisfied with rent support. Neil Fernandes reported that 7 of these were resolved within 9 days, while the rest needed further review.

A survey of 342 households found that 79 percent were satisfied with repairs to old buildings. Neil Fernandes reported that 16 of these were resolved within 29 days, while the rest needed further review. The Riverside housing scheme finished 320 homes. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that the waiting list changed by about 8 percent. The waiting list for affordable homes fell from 1,100 to 640 families. The committee noted that new homes remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Ravi Menon thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on new homes during January and July.

Tom Bridges thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on new homes during May and April. A survey of 277 households found that 92 percent were satisfied with the waiting list. The committee noted that the waiting list remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that repairs to old buildings changed by about 10 percent. The council recorded all decisions on new homes in the minutes, which are open to every resident. The committee noted that the waiting list remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting.

The committee noted that the waiting list remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Residents of Eastside said at a public hearing that the waiting list had improved compared with the previous year. In June, the housing office met at the Kiln Lane depot and reviewed 67 requests from residents about new homes. The council recorded all decisions on the waiting list in the minutes, which are open to every resident. Lata Deshmukh reported that 11 of these were resolved within 18 days, while the rest needed further review.

In February, the housing office met at the Kiln Lane depot and reviewed 72 requests from residents about repairs to old buildings. Rent support went to 450 households. Residents of Riverside said at a public hearing that repairs to old buildings had improved compared with the previous year. Residents of Kiln Lane said at a public hearing that the waiting list had improved compared with the previous year. In December, the housing office met at the Town Hall and reviewed 30 requests from residents about new homes. Residents of Orchard said at a public hearing that new homes had improved compared with the previous year. Omar Haddad thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on repairs to old buildings during June and March.

Priya Nair reported that 48 of these were resolved within 26 days, while the rest needed further review. The committee noted that the waiting list remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. The committee noted that the waiting list remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. The committee noted that repairs to old buildings remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that repairs to old buildings changed by about 11 percent. A survey of 245 households found that 77 percent were satisfied with rent support. Ravi Menon reported that 13 of these were resolved within 10 days, while the rest needed further review.

Priya Nair thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on repairs to old buildings during June and April. Aisha Khan reported that 52 of these were resolved within 6 days, while the rest needed further review. The council recorded all decisions on the waiting list in the minutes, which are open to every resident. A survey of 806 households found that 65 percent were satisfied with the waiting list. The council recorded all decisions on rent support in the minutes, which are open to every resident. The committee noted that rent support remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. In July, the housing office met at the Town Hall and reviewed 47 requests from residents about the waiting list. Neil Fernandes thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on the waiting list during December and April.

The council recorded all decisions on new homes in the minutes, which are open to every resident. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that repairs to old buildings changed by about 15 percent. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that rent support changed by about 3 percent. A survey of 602 households found that 89 percent were satisfied with new homes. Priya Nair reported that 29 of these were resolved within 7 days, while the rest needed further review. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that the waiting list changed by about 3 percent. The council recorded all decisions on the waiting list in the minutes, which are open to every resident.

A survey of 252 households found that 90 percent were satisfied with the waiting list. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that the waiting list changed by about 11 percent. Residents of Riverside said at a public hearing that new homes had improved compared with the previous year. In October, the housing office met at the Orchard Lane centre and reviewed 52 requests from residents about the waiting list. Residents of Riverside said at a public hearing that rent support had improved compared with the previous year. The council recorded all decisions on repairs to old buildings in the minutes, which are open to every resident.

Chapter 11: Finance and Budget

A survey of 896 households found that 55 percent were satisfied with audits. Residents of Lakeside said at a public hearing that the yearly budget had improved compared with the previous year. Residents of Orchard said at a public hearing that the yearly budget had improved compared with the previous year. A survey of 787 households found that 71 percent were satisfied with grant funding. The committee noted that spending reports remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting.

The council recorded all decisions on grant funding in the minutes, which are open to every resident. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that spending reports changed by about 18 percent. The committee noted that grant funding remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Residents of Riverside said at a public hearing that grant funding had improved compared with the previous year. Ravi Menon reported that 55 of these were resolved within 20 days, while the rest needed further review. Aisha Khan reported that 56 of these were resolved within 28 days, while the rest needed further review. In April, the finance committee met at the Mill Road office and reviewed 22 requests from residents about spending reports. Aisha Khan reported that 13 of these were resolved within 3 days, while the rest needed further review.

Priya Nair thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on spending reports during October and May. A survey of 579 households found that 58 percent were satisfied with the yearly budget. In July, the finance committee met at the Mill Road office and reviewed 75 requests from residents about grant funding. Tom Bridges thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on spending reports during May and May. In February, the finance committee met at the Mill Road office and reviewed 52 requests from residents about the yearly budget. The council recorded all decisions on spending reports in the minutes, which are open to every resident. The committee noted that the yearly budget remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting.

Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that audits changed by about 3 percent. Neil Fernandes thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on spending reports during October and January. Ravi Menon thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on audits during March and July. The council recorded all decisions on spending reports in the minutes, which are open to every resident. A survey of 835 households found that 70 percent were satisfied with audits.

Lata Deshmukh thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on the yearly budget during February and April. Residents of Orchard said at a public hearing that the yearly budget had improved compared with the previous year. Residents of Riverside said at a public hearing that the yearly budget had improved compared with the previous year. The total budget was 940 million rupees. The committee noted that the yearly budget remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. The committee noted that spending reports remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. The committee noted that audits remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting.

The committee noted that audits remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Tom Bridges thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on audits during March and June. A survey of 761 households found that 68 percent were satisfied with spending reports. A survey of 243 households found that 68 percent were satisfied with audits. Residents of Lakeside said at a public hearing that the yearly budget had improved compared with the previous year. A survey of 650 households found that 89 percent were satisfied with grant funding. A survey of 253 households found that 67 percent were satisfied with audits. Aisha Khan reported that 29 of these were resolved within 14 days, while the rest needed further review.

Education took the largest share of the budget, at 28 percent. The committee noted that the yearly budget remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. The council recorded all decisions on the yearly budget in the minutes, which are open to every resident. In October, the finance committee met at the Mill Road office and reviewed 28 requests from residents about spending reports. The committee noted that grant funding remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting.

A survey of 563 households found that 78 percent were satisfied with audits. The town ended the year with a surplus of 12 million rupees. Neil Fernandes reported that 41 of these were resolved within 11 days, while the rest needed further review. In September, the finance committee met at the Town Hall and reviewed 35 requests from residents about the yearly budget. A survey of 307 households found that 84 percent were satisfied with the yearly budget. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that audits changed by about 14 percent. A survey of 822 households found that 82 percent were satisfied with the yearly budget.

The committee noted that the yearly budget remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Residents of Millgate said at a public hearing that grant funding had improved compared with the previous year. In April, the finance committee met at the Eastside hall and reviewed 50 requests from residents about grant funding. The council recorded all decisions on the yearly budget in the minutes, which are open to every resident. Neil Fernandes thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on grant funding during June and October. A survey of 722 households found that 83 percent were satisfied with audits. Residents of Lakeside said at a public hearing that spending reports had improved compared with the previous year.

Residents of Kiln Lane said at a public hearing that grant funding had improved compared with the previous year. Omar Haddad thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on grant funding during October and December. Priya Nair thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on grant funding during January and February. A survey of 156 households found that 92 percent were satisfied with audits. Neil Fernandes reported that 14 of these were resolved within 8 days, while the rest needed further review.

Aisha Khan reported that 39 of these were resolved within 11 days, while the rest needed further review.

Chapter 12: Plans for the Future

In October, the planning group met at the Mill Road office and reviewed 82 requests from residents about energy goals. A survey of 619 households found that 83 percent were satisfied with new projects. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that long term plans changed by about 4 percent. The council recorded all decisions on long term plans in the minutes, which are open to every resident. The committee noted that long term plans remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. In January, the planning group met at the Eastside hall and reviewed 42 requests from residents about long term plans. Residents of Orchard said at a public hearing that new projects had improved compared with the previous year.

The town plans a solar farm of 5 megawatts by 2028. The committee noted that public consultation remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Lata Deshmukh reported that 10 of these were resolved within 22 days, while the rest needed further review. The committee noted that energy goals remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Residents of Millgate said at a public hearing that new projects had improved compared with the previous year. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that long term plans changed by about 16 percent. In September, the planning group met at the Mill Road office and reviewed 15 requests from residents about public consultation. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that long term plans changed by about 12 percent.

A survey of 686 households found that 81 percent were satisfied with energy goals. The council recorded all decisions on energy goals in the minutes, which are open to every resident. The council recorded all decisions on public consultation in the minutes, which are open to every resident. The council recorded all decisions on new projects in the minutes, which are open to every resident. Ravi Menon reported that 49 of these were resolved within 19 days, while the rest needed further review. Residents of Lakeside said at a public hearing that new projects had improved compared with the previous year. A community swimming pool is planned for Orchard Lane and will open in 2027. A survey of 611 households found that 69 percent were satisfied with long term plans.

Ravi Menon thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on energy goals during October and April. In December, the planning group met at the Kiln Lane depot and reviewed 16 requests from residents about new projects. Residents of Millgate said at a public hearing that public consultation had improved compared with the previous year. Residents of Eastside said at a public hearing that long term plans had improved compared with the previous year. Lata Deshmukh reported that 15 of these were resolved within 18 days, while the rest needed further review. The council recorded all decisions on energy goals in the minutes, which are open to every resident. A survey of 232 households found that 85 percent were satisfied with new projects. Ravi Menon reported that 5 of these were resolved within 13 days, while the rest needed further review.

In April, the planning group met at the Eastside hall and reviewed 21 requests from residents about long term plans. Lata Deshmukh thanked the volunteers and staff who worked on energy goals during May and April. Omar Haddad reported that 13 of these were resolved within 30 days, while the rest needed further review. The committee noted that long term plans remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. In January, the planning group met at the Town Hall and reviewed 85 requests from residents about new projects. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that energy goals changed by about 3 percent. The committee noted that public consultation remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Mayor Okafor's top goal is to cut average commute times by 20 percent.

A survey of 657 households found that 57 percent were satisfied with public consultation. In November, the planning group met at the Mill Road office and reviewed 80 requests from residents about public consultation. The committee noted that new projects remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Priya Nair reported that 54 of these were resolved within 13 days, while the rest needed further review. Residents of Millgate said at a public hearing that long term plans had improved compared with the previous year.

In December, the planning group met at the Kiln Lane depot and reviewed 86 requests from residents about public consultation. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that long term plans changed by about 17 percent. Omar Haddad reported that 12 of these were resolved within 27 days, while the rest needed further review. The council recorded all decisions on new projects in the minutes, which are open to every resident. A survey of 893 households found that 70 percent were satisfied with energy goals. In May, the planning group met at the Mill Road office and reviewed 42 requests from residents about new projects. The committee noted that long term plans remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting.

A survey of 668 households found that 68 percent were satisfied with new projects. The council recorded all decisions on public consultation in the minutes, which are open to every resident. Lata Deshmukh reported that 19 of these were resolved within 10 days, while the rest needed further review. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that public consultation changed by about 17 percent. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that long term plans changed by about 10 percent. Priya Nair reported that 36 of these were resolved within 6 days, while the rest needed further review. In January, the planning group met at the Mill Road office and reviewed 45 requests from residents about energy goals.

In March, the planning group met at the Mill Road office and reviewed 90 requests from residents about long term plans. The committee noted that energy goals remained a priority, and it asked staff to prepare a short update for the next meeting. Residents of Eastside said at a public hearing that public consultation had improved compared with the previous year. Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that public consultation changed by about 12 percent. Tom Bridges reported that 37 of these were resolved within 3 days, while the rest needed further review.

Staff compared the figures with the last three years and found that long term plans changed by about 2 percent. The council recorded all decisions on long term plans in the minutes, which are open to every resident.